FOREWORD

"Next in importance to freedom and justice is popular education without which neither freedom nor justice can be permanently maintained," wrote James Garfield, who, like Abraham Lincoln, had been a rugged scholar of the Log Cabin school. The education obtained by book and experience rounded out these hardy pioneer boys into strong patriots.

With the promise of a shorter working-day and longer hours to be used for recreation there also comes a sense of our responsibility to prepare for this near-future leisure. By rounding out our education it can enrich our lives and in turn those of our friends.

In schools, which are organized with different nationalities, there is much chance for executive ability to be shown. Students are eager to grasp this power and to use it wisely. Although they are not wholly guided by others' opinions and actions, they strive to follow the examples set for them by present executives.

As there are in Congress various committees which help decide the actions of the United States, so are there in Thornton clubs which factor in the policies of the school. Only through concurrent effort of all members can there be success.

NORTHWEST VIEW OF MAIN ENTRANCE

Under the shady trees we find nature arrayed in all her personal beauty.

THE FOUNTAIN

As the sparkling water gushes from the fountain, so does enthusiasm overflow in youth.

The sun's bright rays pierce and dispel the gloom of disappointment.

NORTH ENTRANCE

As the tree boughs o'ershadow the entrance so does God, the Creator of all nature, watch over us with loving kindness.

LEFT OF MAIN ENTRANCE.

As the ivy creeps steadily over the old walls, so the students consistently pursue the knowledge of the ancients.

MAIN ENTRANCE

The portals of knowledge beckon ambitious youth.

ADMINISTRATION

Just as the nation has followed its outstanding leaders, Washington, Lincoln, and Roosevelt, so do we of Thornton follow the understanding guidance of our faculty.

Our teachers in our estimation stand for the highest ideals in intelligent citizenship. Because of this wisdom they are fit to lead us in the paths of such patriotism.

We are eager to follow in their foot-steps, for as upright citizens we will need honest knowledge to guide us toward the right. Our faculty is trying to give us this knowledge through its wise teachings in loyalty.

Intellectual citizens will be needed to carry on the vast amount of the work in the country. If we can retain the knowledge imparted to us by our teachers we will have advanced up the ladder toward successful citizenship.

In the years to come, as we strive to reach our goals, we will be deeply indebted to our teachers for their loyal and understanding wisdom in training us to be better citizens of these United States.

The knowledge we gain here will help us to be more valuable leaders of our government, to which we owe our highest allegiance; for it is only through intelligent citizenship that the administration of our land shall prosper.

CLASSES

Our forefathers, back in the days when America was young, fought for political and religious freedom that we might have intellectual freedom. And it is through their efforts at Independence Hall, where the Declaration was signed, that we have that intellectual liberty.

Gradually through the years we have developed this freedom until today Thornton's classes represent the part of school life where we show what intellectual freedom we have gained.

The freshmen, the sophomores, the juniors, and the seniors—each group portrays a step higher in the field of learning. Each has learned a bit more of citizenship and allegiance to his country. But separately we cannot grow as well into worthy citizenship as when we are united and taught together the meaning and value of faithful allegiance to the Union.

If we are to use our intellectual freedom to the best advantage, we will use it wisely in learning to be outstanding citizens.

As we progress each year, we are becoming more of a credit to those courageous people of Revolutionary days, for we are using their valuable help in getting an education.

If Gainsborough, the painter, could have lived today, he might have said, what the United States needs most for its ever-increasing governmental work is men of thought and action, for he believed in "real performance and not genius," although he himself was both a great worker and genius.

All great persons of history have been thinkers and doers. Isaac Newton gave credit for his accomplishments to patient thought, and Pasteur, his, to work and will.

That students, representatives of American schools, be clear, active thinkers is as important to them, the citizens of tomorrow, as it is to their parents that representatives in Congress be conscientious citizens.

What we are in the future depends upon how we take this opportunity for education. Fundamental differences between people come from knowing how to use free time, and how they employ it decides their character—what kind of citizens they are.

Although students are not given much chance today to put into practice what they are learning, tomorrow will decide. A steadily developed talent is more appreciated by most people than a suddenly popular one, for enduring popularity fully tests the value of talent.

If these students will be better citizens tomorrow for having had educational opportunities, the main purpose of the development of talent will have been met.

Spanish Club

As time goes on, moments of leisure are no longer spent in developing more thoroughly the common, everyday pastimes of living. People of today realize the necessity of becoming better acquainted with some of the more cultured diversions of life.

Today, more than ever before, we see the people of the United States and other countries of the world learning to speak languages foreign to their own. In high school Spanish clubs are filled by students who are eager to become familiar not only with the language itself but also with the customs and habits of the Spanish-speaking peoples.

It is through this study that we gain a sympathetic interest, which enables our governments to maintain friendly relations.

German Club

For the large group of us who have never seen the peaceful peasant life of old Germany and can hardly visualize the development of its industrial centers, Die Deutsche Ecke brings about an acquaintance that not only provides a worthwhile study in leisure moments but also stimulates a friendly feeling for our German neighbors.

This study of the German people furnishes an intellectual pastime—one that gives us a clear perception of their folk tales and customs, and it is this glimpse into their lives that makes us sympathize with them more fully.

Because of this knowledge we would gladly back our government at any time in aiding our German neighbors if they should need our help in their problems.

Latin Club

How thoughtless are we of today, who lightheartedly pursue our desires, forgetful of how much we owe those who have lived here before us!

Too few feel any spirit of gratitude to those old Romans, who conquered and ruled the world.

True, they made many mistakes, but would we have yet reached the present milestone in civilization if they had not contributed to the enlightenment of mankind?

The Latin club was organized to inspire students to appreciate and profit by the examples of these ancient Romans.

It aspires to put life and breath into the pages of history and stir in the youth of today a higher, a truer patriotism.

For the past few years we have been faced with the problem of world peace, and it is doubtful if this problem will be solved within the next few years.

It is the duty of the youth of today to equip themselves to face this question intelligently. They must endeavor to acquire for themselves a knowledge of other peoples and to use this knowledge as a basis for understanding.

Le Cercle Francais has been organized for the purpose of encouraging students in their efforts to learn of the life of the French people.

Thus, we see our young patriots preparing themselves to form a nucleus of the future promoters of international peace and friendship.

Study Hall Service Council

"This is a service for my country, and it doesn't matter whether I do it as an officer or as a plainsman. The big thing is to do it," emphatically replied 'Kit' Carson to his friends, resentful against the politicians who would not confirm his appointment as lieutenant in the Rifle Corps after Carson had done perilous scouting work.

Whole-hearted service without shirking work is what the Study Hall Service Council advocates.

With so much work, some of which is of interest to every person, there need be no one with "nothing to do." The happiest people in the world and the best citizens are those who keep busy doing worthwhile projects.

Athedelphi

Sympathetic understanding of people and conditions is perhaps the most important quality which creative writing can give to a good writer. The wide reading necessary for this field helps, by increasing his knowledge, to broaden his viewpoint and to make him think more clearly and logically.

The thrill that comes to the writer of creating something entirely his own, of weaving into his writing beautiful image-making phrases, which crystallize on paper, his dreams, is his and his alone.

Well used leisure time which makes a person more compatible and sympathetic with his fellow-beings and gives him an intellectual, worthwhile pastime also makes for a more loyal American citizen.

Science Club

We are living in a scientific world. That people of today are eager to learn more about science was shown by the unpredicted popularity of the Hall of Science at the recent Century of Progress Exposition. Its frequentation by people who were not thus trained has shown interest in higher scientific problems.

The students of the recently organized Science club use their spare moments to further their knowledge of the principles they have learned in the classroom.

The success of the club shows that students are anxious to use their free time in studying that which will aid them in keeping pace with present as well as future times and will make them loyal, intelligent citizens of the United States.

Stamp Club

As an entertaining and worthwhile activity, the Stamp club strives to teach the basic principles of citizenship and to save as a method of profitably filling the spare moments of some of Thornton's students.

As they pursue the study of stamp-collecting, they are becoming familiar with a hobby that provides a use for their leisure minutes while at the same time they are learning the fundamentals of loyal citizenship. Combining these two purposes in stamp collecting, they are developing their lives to conform to the highest aim of the nation—true citizenship.

By forming their characters in occupying their free time with an excellent objective, they are becoming worthy and loyal patriots.

Home Economics Club

What organization goes further than the Home Economics club in preparing girls for future citizenship?

While girls are acquiring practical knowledge in domestic science, they are training themselves to build homes economically and beautifully. Their dwellings will be the center of their children's lives—the place where character will be developed in a way that tends toward honest citizenship.

Thus, while they are preparing themselves as upright citizens, they will also be preparing their children for outstanding citizenship by providing character-building family life.

The Home Economics club does its part for Thornton girls by guiding them toward the highest goal of womanhood—the establishment of homes.

Honor Society

Scholarship, service, leadership, and character, requirements for the National Honor Society, encourage young American students in their acquirement of foreseeing genius, that power which the United States needs of its people.

The goal of attaining it is not reached merely by the step furnished by the Society, but by bringing the person into a little better view of his own goal, it then urges him on.

Only application of what one has learned can bring an individual to his highest aim, for knowledge alone is of no value; character counts far more than intellect. For every person who has the faculty of application there lies a new world to conquer.

P. T. A.

World scholars say that America is a land where everybody goes to school and nobody studies. To remedy this condition has been the work of the P.T.A. By co-operation in supplying certain needs the parents and teachers have strengthened the desire of students to obtain schooling.

Dullards often try to console themselves with the thought that many great men in the world have had no education, but in that they are. Perhaps they have had no opportunity for education, but by patient study they have frequently out-versed those who attended school.

For most modern people there is no urge to get any further ahead in the world, but the parents and teachers try to inspire youth.

Hook and Curve

Girls and women are rapidly being recognized as participants in the business and commercial world of man.

Thornton offers wonderful opportunities to girls in business training. Not only are there commercial classes, but also the Hook and Curve club, which was organized for the purpose of arousing in girls enthusiasm for office work.

The world is sadly in need of women who will carry into offices the highest ideals of womanhood and will strive to eliminate the sordidness and dishonesty so often found in business.

Thus, as these girls bear aloft the flaming torch of womanhood, they will lift themselves out of the drabness of everyday life and fill their niches in the world.

ACTIVITIES

"Do not let yourselves be tainted by a deprecating and barren skepticism.—Live in the serene peace of laboratories and libraries," Louis Pasteur declared on his seventieth birthday when being honored as one of the greatest victors of all time—victor over innumerable disease enemies of humanity.

It is in the quiet hour, when one leaves the crowd of merry-makers, that inspirations come, and worthwhile achievements are accomplished.

To look serenely into the future, we must have resources within ourselves. We must develop hobbies to fill our spare moments.

The lessons we learn in classes may be forgotten unless we make practical applications in outside activities.

"The world is so full of a number of things,

I am sure we should all be as happy as kings."

What a true quotation! Yet how few realize it! In the hurry and scurry of everyday life, we forget the many powers at our beck and call.

Many economic forces now arrayed under the NRA banner are waging battle against our biggest enemy, unemployment. In this great struggle against a common cause various nationalities within the United States have wholeheartedly cooperated, but it rests upon all citizens to work in a willing and unbiased fashion. Thus will the present measures be permanent.

Being able to find beauty and joy in life even under trying circumstances is a value which, when once a person has it, nothing can ever take away. Whatsoever discouragements the world may have in store for that individual, his outlook on life may be cheerful because he can create happiness in his own sphere.

Beethoven, in composing the Eroica Symphony, was gradually being shut away from the outside world, as deafness closed in upon him, but neither deafness nor any other misfortune could deprive his musical soul of the beautiful world of melody which he had once gained and now could keep when elements seemed against him.

Even today there is a world of beautiful music, some to be played and some to be composed, challenging young, ambitious musicians; the orchestra encourages these students to meet the challenge.

John Sebastian Bach's son, Karl Philipp Emanuel, composer-musician, as well as Pietro Mascagni, composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," commented severely upon the jazz of their day. They would have been horrified to know that many modern Americans can think of music only in terms of jazz. Karl Bach thought "the true purpose of music—to touch the heart." To like worthwhile music is encouraged in the orchestra.

When a musician's vision is bent on high ideals and not on passing popular fancy, permanent happiness comes not only to the musician but also to music lovers down the ages.

Orchestra students can find more loveliness in a piece of good music at every playing of it; years later they will be able to appreciate it more because of the happy memories they can connect with their playing of it.

For having learned the value of cooperation and harmony and obtained an appreciation of good music, having made lasting friendships and having discovered a priceless something of which nothing can rob them, some seventy-five orchestra students will be better American citizens.

"Hats off! The flag is passing by!" How we thrill when we hear the words and see the flag go by, borne by young men, surrounded by music as the band marches on with drums beating, bugles blaring, trumpets blowing!

But do we ever consider the years of training these young people have received, the thought and effort which have been expended on their music?

In our school there is a considerable number of boys and girls who have talent for music and are trying to develop that talent. Through individual effort each has mastered the technique of playing some instrument. Under different teachers each has acquired ability to perform satisfactorily on his instrument.

They then come to school and under the bandmaster learn to unite their efforts and their talents. They learn cooperation and teamwork, most essential lessons of life.

As they strive to reach perfection, they unconsciously become connoisseurs. They learn to discriminate between well-written and poorly-written music.

They comprehend the faults in a poorly-written composition, while the ordinary person with little or no musical background merely finds that music doesn't appeal to him.

As we look into the future, we find promise of much leisure time which we may use for our own enjoyment and improvement. How many of us have resources within ourselves which will suffice us in the future?

How many of us have a foundation of knowledge on which to build a culture of our own? How many of us have been trained to appreciate good music, art, or literature?

These young people are building a foundation for themselves which will serve as a basis for further study in the field of music. They are learning to appreciate good music. They need not be content with jazz, but by turning to beautiful compositions, may find soul-satisfying diversion.

They can find pleasure for themselves and may entertain their friends by creating music.

How few people have the ability to comprehend the marvelous possibilities of the future! Roosevelt, with the NRA plan, promises shorter working hours and more leisure time for everyone.

Although most people welcome these words, few of them realize their responsibilities in educating themselves to use this extra time profitably.

In the past we have been too much occupied earning our bread and butter to appreciate the beauty which surrounds us. We have heretofore ignored the blessed gifts of the Creator.

Are we mentally and spiritually equipped to enjoy these blessings? Can we adjust ourselves to a new life, a finer and broader one? Have we the ability to recognize and appreciate artistic achievements in literature, music, art, or wherever we may find them?

We have in our school enterprising students who desire to secure for themselves greater cultural advantages. Many are responsive to the beauty of music.

Only a few, perhaps, shall ever become great musicians, but many are talented and wish to use this talent for their own pleasure and enjoyment.

To aid these youthful singers in training their voices, glee clubs have been organized. The Girls Glee club has proved itself an inspiration to the school.

What joy these girls will radiate, how many hearts they will soothe, how much comfort they can give to others as the words with a song in their hearts take their places in the world!

How useful they will find this talent as they build homes for their children. What sweeter memories are there than those of a mother singing to her children? Where can one find more true joy and comfort than in the family singing?

These girls, in building homes, will foster the future leaders of our country. They will set examples for the coming generation in their use of spare moments.

For their future these young girls are laying up joys for themselves which the world cannot take from them by depressions or misfortunes.

BOYS GLEE CLUB

T. R. ... H. ... I. ... W. ... M. ... P. ...

Many boys have a desire for music, although they are not all Carusos or T. b. betts, they can attain a certain degree of proficiency that will satisfy their need for self-expression and will give pleasure to others.

When they have reached this state, they may spend their leisure hours with themselves and others with their songs.

This is one of the reasons that the Boys Glee club has proved popular. The boys have spent much of their time in training their voices in order to present concerts for the benefit and enjoyment of others. All the while they have been enjoying their practicing. What could be a better way for spending leisure hours?

Concerts, operas, choruses, and other musical careers are constantly presenting themselves to those who have initiative to undertake the task of training their voices for such positions. It is through the Boys Glee club that so many acquire this training, and it is for this reason that the club is so popular with the boys.

Singing is the best way to express oneself. It is a thing of the soul, and it is one of the things that make life worth living. It is a way of life, and it is a way of life that is worth living.

Boys glee clubs have been founded all over the country in order that their songs may delight their hearers. These boys will be glad to sing to others with their combined efforts in singing.

These boys will have the opportunity of becoming men who will be great leaders, for one requirement of such a patriot is certainly that he be a man of happiness of his fellow-men at heart and of his fellow-men in his life. This happiness of others is the greatest demand of a loyal citizen. What better type of citizen could our country want ask than men like these?

Groups of these men will form the basis of our future, and set the example for a new era of citizenship.

Journalism

"Acquisition of stout, high-powered character is an essential of topnotch literary work," Henry Justin Smith, Managing Editor of the Chicago Daily News says. "The really big writers have been men almost too big to be writers at all."

The two main requirements for journalism students to membership in the Quill and Scroll Society are that they excel in dependability and scholarship.

Dependability and fine character mean much to the making of a good citizen. If every young person could be taught through the journalism class to carry his "message to Garcia" as well as once did Andrew Rowan, who performed this exploit of the Spanish-American War, the main purpose of the class would be satisfied.

Annual Art Staff

Pictures speak a language common to all and often convey the desired impressions more quickly and easily than words ever could. While the memory of a good speech may ring in many ears for a long time, a fine drawing or painting can often be remembered for a lifetime.

From childhood up that desire to draw or to look at some drawing of colored designs can be found more or less in every person. Each year new and attractive uses are found for various kinds of drawings.

The Thorntonite's art staff as well as other artists can contribute happiness to hearts the world over as long as humanity exists.

They will bring joy and beauty into lives that perhaps would otherwise be barren.

Orators

Today a charming and earnest speaker or conversationalist, since his talk reflects his personality, is one of the most effective persons in influencing others.

Centuries ago this fact was realized when Publius Syrus declared, "Speech is a mirror of the soul: as a man speaks, so is he."

Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, emphasizes the importance of everyone's knowing how to speak, for now nearly every person has some occasion to speak publicly.

"Speech is the golden harvest that followeth the flowering of thought," according to Tupper. Oratorical speaking encourages this harvest to be a plentiful one.

Forum

Our nation calls for loyal spokesmen who will firmly and steadfastly strive to lead their fellow countrymen to the right.

Here is a challenge, young people! How are we going to answer it?

The Forum flings back a courageous cry, "We will uphold the standards of our forefathers and carry on the good work where they left off.

"We will follow in the footsteps of Lincoln and Webster, keeping uppermost in our minds the preservation of the Union.

"We will use our intelligence to search for the truth and employ our oratory to reveal this truth to the masses."

Arousing a sense of conscientious duty and patriotism in the unconscientious people is indeed a worthy task for citizens.

You and I

It has been said that an art cannot be taught—it must be practiced. People for generations have evidently believed this, for the existence of drama seems to justify it.

At Thornton dramatic practice follows closely the teaching of dramatic theory. Students enact plays in public speaking classes until they are so proficient that they can put on plays for the general public. This bit of delving into the study of drama gives them a taste of acting and inspires them on to new heights of stage performance. It acquaints them with this occupation so that they may choose it for their life work.

Opportunities in the movies and on the legitimate stage are constantly presented to youthful actors. Either of these provides one with experience that may some day lead him to recognition in the world of drama.

Drama offers many possibilities to young actors. Aside from the acting, the fields of costuming, stage setting, make-up, property managing, and directing are opened. Thornton through its plays offers these studies to students who are interested. Two plays, "You and I," given by the Girls and Boys clubs, and "Thank You," given by the senior class, proved to be this year's opportunities for our dramatically-talented students to provide the public with worthwhile entertainment.

Drama has its moral teachings, too. It teaches us an appreciation of life in all its complexities. We see the passing of other people's lives and begin to value our own niches in the world.

Through drama we see the events of others' lives. We live those people's lives in happiness or sorrow as the drama portrays them on the stage. We begin to appreciate our fellow-men and to sympathize with them. We get a different outlook on life from having had a glimpse into their existence.

The varied lives of foreign peoples show us how beautiful and how worthwhile our own world is. This contrast, pictured by drama, teaches us to appreciate our nation and its people.

Thank You

Jay Glahrist, Henry Edlmeyer, Lorenz Kiley, Fred Zimmerman, John Zwiers, Benson Fisher, Fred McGee, Charles Johnson

Those individuals who are ardent followers of movies and stage plays are some of the players on the great stage of life, for as Shakespeare termed it, "All the world's a stage, and all the men and women are merely players."

Drama has such a decided effect upon these persons that they have high ambitions of becoming as great as some of their heroes. They go about school imitating the mannerisms of prominent movie and stage stars. Their walks, their facial expressions, and their clothes show the influence of a more sophisticated generation.

Then suddenly their hero worship is focused upon another star. And so it goes, week in and week out. As ideals change, so do ambitions change. Is there wonder that youth is such a confusion of personalities?

Some actors make people long for higher ideals, more courtesy and refinement. Have you noticed would-be actresses who have a penitent "I'm sorry" on their lips for the least noticeable offense? Or those who trip daintily down the halls, imitating the graceful walk of some cinema heroine?

It is in these screen gods and goddesses that high school students fix their instinctive need for hero worship. Before the era of movies, stage stars were held in higher esteem in the eyes of youth, but since movies have come into being, their actors have come into prominence.

The plays enacted on the stage and in the movies are what give the actors the opportunity to display the personality that attracts high school students. A drama without the love angle would probably hold no enticement for them. Yet it is likely that a Western play is just as popular with the boys who have for their heroes those wild and woolly cowboys. Yes, there are still some boys who hope to be cowboys when they "grow up!"

Thus, we see that modern drama distinctly influences the personalities and lives of the youth of today.

GIRLS CLUB

Greatly needed for life today is that steady, calm and optimistic viewpoint which, unhappily, has been submerged for several years by the financial crisis. For the girl or woman in the home the task of uplifting these discouraged minds is especially designed.

Homemaking is joymaking. The woman represents the home and her personality is reflected in the outward appearance of the house.

Men have always derived inspiration from women. "All that I am or ever hope to be, I owe to my angel mother," said Lincoln, the American idol. How often this sentiment has been echoed in the hearts of men!

As the Red Cross administers to the physical needs of all people, the Girls club attends to the social needs of all Thornton girls.

It teaches them to meet the troubles of life with assurance and cheerfulness. With a firm faith in God and a determined joy, they chase away the shadows and enter into the fullness of life.

While helping others to return to the optimistic side of life, the girls themselves are aided materially by the club when the need is great; the club also helps all girls to make good use of their leisure.

Many people will be able to say some day as did blind Helen Keller, "Keep your face to the sunshine and you cannot see the shadow."

Officers and Board of Control

The Girls club, a fundamental part of Thornton Township high school, is guided by its own leaders—its major officers

These girls are chosen for their offices only after proving themselves capable of obeying others, for the Girls club realizes that only one who has learned to receive orders from others can assume the responsibility of issuing them.

The Board of Control, a representative group, aids the officers in carrying out plans for the good of all the girls.

Interest in and respect for the laws of Thornton are instilled in each new member of the club by the unceasing effort of the officers and their assistants.

Thus, the girls are fitting themselves to become loyal leaders of their country.

Girls Club Division Chairmen

One of the greatest obstacles to overcome in a large organization is that of keeping in touch with each individual member.

The Girls club has various ways of doing this, but the most important way is through the Division chairmen, who take attendance in their homerooms.

They urge girls to keep up their interest and enthusiasm for school and thus help to prevent girls from quitting school.

What better task is there for a club than that of keeping its members loyal to their school? Here is the place where the girls are taught to be real citizens.

To be true Americans they are taught that the measure of personal success comes not in self interest but in service to others.

Girls Club Council

Girls who belong to the Council of the Girls club have bettered this organization by discussing the needs and problems of the club and acting directly upon their decisions.

This participation in the governing of our Girls club gives these Council members a knowledge of the regulation of the government of a small body, so that when they are older, they are capable of being more active in the affairs of the country, because they will have gained information that guides them to carry out their duties as loyal inhabitants of the nation. As faithful women and just citizens they will know from their understanding of the working of the Girls club how to settle the problems of our land.

Girls Club House Committee

Many small services must be performed in order that large groups of people may enjoy their leisure time.

As it is essential for cogs in a wheel to be evenly spaced and of the same size in order to make the wheel go smoothly, it is of utmost importance that many seemingly small duties be carried out.

Hostesses, custodians, secretaries, marshals, couriers, and secretaries of attendance are the cogs in the immense wheel of the Girls club.

Newcomers are immediately put at ease and shown how to fill their free moments.

Without these numerous persons, executing their duties to excellence, it would be impossible for the club to continue to function at its high rate of competence.

Business Projects

Perhaps no more versatile person could be found in the world of American business-women than Frances Perkins, the first woman in a presidential cabinet.

Neatly dressed Miss Perkins (Mrs. Paul Wilson) is a woman of poise despite long hours of work, which her busy life demands. She charmingly fulfills her duties as home-keeper, lecturer and artist and reflects her cheery disposition upon all those she meets.

To have a well-rounded personality is the desire of every girl. In the business projects the practical side of a girl's education has been stressed. This will help her in her future life to manage her business affairs better because of the practical experience that her work has given her.

Activity Point Commission

"Hull House," a rising young newspaper man said to Jane Addams, "was the first house I had ever been in where books and magazines just lay around as if there were plenty of them in the world." This man had found, as many others have under Miss Addams' influence, a life-work he enjoyed.

Loving service to others has been Jane Addams' key-note; many lives have been made richer and more beautiful by her patient, kindly interest.

To encourage girls to be of service to others and thus help them to find joy in living is the aim of the Activity Point Commission. Then can be found the true meaning of Jane Addams' "Work is the house that love lives in."

Junior Service Award

"Recollect that trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle," remarked Michelangelo, a great perfecter, who never let a piece of sculpture or painting leave his hand until he had corrected every possible imperfection obvious to him. He later in his life revealed, "If people knew how hard I have had to work to gain my mastery, it wouldn't seem wonderful at all."

Steady, patient work seems to have been emphasized by many great characters. The Girls club junior Service Award emphasizes continuous, useful work toward some worthwhile cause and helps to prepare the girls to be of service to others. This award helps to teach girls how to use, as Disraeli said, increased means and increased leisure, two civilizers of human beings.

Girls Club Honor Roll

Although not everyone can be an A student, each one can try to do her level best. The Girls club Honor Roll was begun to inspire its members to achieve good scholarship.

The world has a large percentage of men and women who have contributed to the welfare of mankind through their pursuit of knowledge from early youth.

Thornton Township high school, together with the Girls club, is aiding in preparing girls to take their positions in a world where women are placed on an equal footing with men in science, business, politics, and other fields of endeavor.

They are also equipping themselves with knowledge which will aid them as they strive to fulfill their duties as citizens.

Perhaps no one realized more the value of early preparation for a fine life than did the straight-forward, clear-thinking Theodore Roosevelt, who preached "not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life."

To live courageously, fearlessly, and wholeheartedly is the quickest road to true happiness. It is not the spineless, weak-kneed individual who is satisfied and contented with life. It is the active, energetic, wide-awake person, constantly on the alert for opportunities, using his privileges to further the happiness of others as well as of himself, who is the hope of the nation.

As from early boyhood Roosevelt was constantly preparing himself to be his best in each of the many fields he attempted, so does the Boys club prepare its boys to exert as wholesome an influence as Roosevelt's in whatever line of work they intend to follow.

School means more to these boys than mere lessons from books. It furnishes contacts with men who are endeavoring to prepare them to meet the battles of life with courage, wisdom, and understanding. They learn that life is real! Life is earnest!"

Not only do they know the right, as the Athenians, but like the Spartans, do it.

Officers and Board of Directors

To help each boy become "not a man of iron, but of live oak," as James A. Garfield once put it, is one purpose of the Boys club officers and directors. When iron snaps from a flaw, the break is complete, but the live oak yields to difficulty only under great pressure.

Being able to recognize the right way to do a job and then to forge ahead doing it are important factors in life. Robert Peary had such ability. Because he refused to fail when under danger and privation, he gained his way to the North Pole the first man to stand on top of the world.

American boys with initiative can help the United States stay "on top of the world" only by the same dauntless spirit.

Freshman Advisers

The freshman Advisers, a group of senior members of the Boys club, strive to build strong personalities and honest characters in the younger boys.

They endeavor, through weekly group meetings with the freshman boys, to mold these quickly-forming characters into foundation walls sufficiently solid to withstand future tests and trials.

Vigorous personalities and determined characters compose a large part of true citizens. Love for and loyalty to their country develop as the souls of these boys enlarge under the kindly guidance of their advisers.

The senior boys, too, as they attempt to lead the younger boys, find an opportunity for personal leadership and development.

Stag Eats and Booster Committees

Youth means enthusiasm, courage, faith in the future and belief in high ideals.

In keeping up a boy's determination to succeed in things worth while the father plays a large part. By showing faith in his boy he helps the boy to have faith in himself; as a result, there is better understanding and companionship between the two. The Stag acts as an incentive to this feeling.

What is wanted now, as Calvin Coolidge worded, is not material development or intellectual power, but more spiritual development plus character and culture.

In order to keep these ideals aloft among the manhood of tomorrow it is essential that they be held up to the boys of today.

Lettermens Club

Athletic activities are rapidly becoming of national interest. Foreigners quickly perceive this American tendency toward sports.

The Lettermens club was organized as an honorary society for those who earned special recognition for themselves and received their T's.

Who can estimate the good work this club has accomplished in interesting boys in developing sound, healthy bodies?

What essential lessons of sportsmanship and fair play are learned in the long hours spent in conquering the technique of the game!

Certainly they need no sounder principles than those of honesty and justice as they strive to become successful.

Hi-Y

"Courage, in some form, we must have if we are not to fall trampled beneath the feet of circumstance," writes W. J. Dawson. "It is the coward alone for whom defeat is final."

Every life has its share of disappointment and failure; the difference between men is how they stand up under difficulty; seeming impediments may bring out greatness. The Hi-Y tries to instill courage and fine character in every member.

The same fundamental courage is seen in all great historical characters and outwardly these persons have been different. Paul had the courage of great enthusiasm. Galileo had the courage to declare continuously to an unbelieving, critical world his scientific discoveries.

Ushers

"I will find a way or make one," Hannibal's answer to skeptics who doubted his ability to invade Italy by taking his army over the Alps would be a good reply for boys who have found a worthy goal and intend with all their power to reach it despite rebuffs or hard knocks.

Although Boys club ushers help in school functions, they also aid in school life.

David Bruce, discoverer of the tsetse fly, was only a laboratory man, but a good one. When nine thousand defeated English soldiers were in desperate need of medical aid, Bruce was there and ready to do his best—thus saving many lives.

America couldn't ask more of her citizens than to endeavor to live according to their highest ideal.

Chess, Checker and Harmonica Club

"The test of a nation's civilization is the way it utilizes its leisure time.—Recreation can become either 'wreck-reation' or 'recreation'," states Chicago's James Edward Rogers.

With the NRA enforcing a thirty-five-hour week in industry, experts have figured that there will be fifty-six hours a week for each individual to do as he pleases. Something more than movies and radio will have to keep forty-five million adults happy then.

An amateur who has a hobby he enjoys often excels even professionals in their own line of work.

The telegrapher Edison's hobby was electricity; physician Warwick Deeping's, writing; musician Herschel's, astronomy.

First Aid Club

There could be no finer aim of any organization than that of the First Aid club—to ease the suffering of humanity. Knowledge of the fundamentals of first aid has often helped people to save others' lives.

Being able to give aid quickly and efficiently when it is needed requires a thorough understanding of the subject, and that, in turn, demands much practical schooling for those interested in it.

Whether one thinks or not that his profession demands knowing how to give first aid, there are always times that such information would be valuable to others.

First aid takes one's mind off his own problems and, by focusing it on someone else's, makes him think and live less selfishly.

ATHLETICS

Those students who participate in athletics at high school learn more than merely training in sports. They are developing accuracy, competence, self-reliance, and many other qualities of leadership. Athletic activity builds character.

Athletics carry the principles of clean sportsmanship and fair play with them throughout their lives. These lessons learned on the baseball or football field or in the swimming pool cannot be forgotten soon, for they become woven into the warp and woof of a person's character. This development will lead them toward worthier citizenship, for it is through the knowledge of many subjects that we shall have power.

Combining physical training with mental development, athletics indeed aid upright citizenship.

The alert, judicious mind is the master mind that will triumph in crises. We continually come face to face with crises in our daily life. It is the man or woman who can decide swiftly and judiciously and carry out his or her decisions who will be the victor in the game of Life.

Our government will be calling for outstanding men and women to lead the nation in future years. Due to our participation in athletics, we will be summoned as physically and morally developed citizens to direct the country.

ATHLETICS

The Benchwarmer

"To the victor belong the spoils;" to Thornton belong bronze, silver, and gold trophies; to the lettermen belong their proud T's; but to a benchwarmer belong disappointment, knocks, yearnings, hopes.

I am a benchwarmer, a sub. This is the game deciding the championship.

I sit on the sharp edge of the bench, every nerve tense, as I watch Flash, the quarterback, my rival.

I see our halfback, on the opponents' 41-yard line, get the ball and dip off seven yards before he is downed. There he goes for six more and a first down, ten!

Flash's signals come, distinctly, 7-14-16, his play around left end. He gets the ball and goes eleven yards before he is downed but fumbles and the opponents recover. Why didn't he hang on to the ball? If I had been there—! If he had got by that man.

The opponents must punt. The pig-skin lands in Flash's hands on his own 16-yard line, and he goes for 15 more before he is tackled.

On five straight plays he makes 52 yards. Then he calls for a place-kick! Why doesn't he take a chance for a touchdown? Dumbness must be luck; the place-kick is good. We lead 3-0 as the third quarter ends.

On the kick-off play the opponents' quarterback runs through our whole team for a touchdown.

Then on an exchange of punts, with only a few minutes to go, the ball in our possession on the opponents' 30-yard line, Flash calls for a forward pass, which is good for 16 yards, putting us on the opponents' 14-yard line. I can see their line weakening. But Flash tries two runs around end, trying to get all fourteen yards at one time. These two plays net us eight yards with only six to go for a touchdown.

Then Flash calls for a quarterback sneak. He gets the ball and goes right between center and guard for the remaining six yards.

He has won the game and the championship for us, while I, a better player, (I think), have to warm the bench.

There you have it; now had I been in there we would have won 18-6. In the first place I wouldn't have fumbled in the third quarter and we would have had a 6-0 lead.

Again instead of place-kicking I would have taken the chance on scoring a touchdown but not Flash; he thought three points were as big as a mountain.

In the last minutes I'd have smacked their weakening line to nothing with our plunging fullback. Then I would have been a hero capturing the headlines, but instead I'm only a bench-warmer.

That is the story of a sub, the underdog. Yet to this boy and many like him we owe an honor—the honor of our championship team. It is he who is responsible for that achievement of our school; had there not been that keen rivalry between Flash and the sub, the play on the field might have been much poorer.

Football

As senior bearers of the pigskin leave Thornton, local fans will miss William Pajak's pass receiving, vicious blocking, and tackling. "Bill" has put in two years of faithful service at left end on the varsity squad.

Another veteran who has played his last game for the Purple and White is Louis Grahovac. His quick, rapier-like thrusts were valuable ground-gainers as the opponents failed to stop him.

"Bob" Taylor and Thomas Nisbet, the two halfbacks, provided most of the offensive punch and defensive ability of the light backfield. Taylor's all-round performance and Nisbet's passing and punting will be hard to replace.

Thornton's two fullbacks, Hubert Coston and William Diekelman, provided the weight and power to the 6-3-2 defense.

All-South Suburban center and tackle, Captain Charles Ratkus and Andrew Fronczek respectively, and two of the best linesmen in the state, were the bulwark of a synchronized machine, well-versed in the art of blocking, tackling, and diagnosing opponents' moves.

Many stars are expected to show particular brilliance next season, judging from their performance last fall. In this group are: William Shumpes, a lanky lad noted for his ruthlessness in dealing with opponents' ball carriers; Sidney Wiltshire; Edward Bernor; Teddy Czech, a smart, aggressive tackle; Howard McMorris, one of Thornton's best ends of recent years; Paul Stan, and Rudolph Reu Boiu.

Spring football practice, under the guidance of Coach Huddleston, attracted more than forty candidates. The result is a veteran line of proved ability and a backfield of little, or no, experience for next season.

Consisting wholly of brushing up on the fundamentals of the game and teaching the green material their way about the football greensward, spring football uncovers many hard-working, ambitious men who may someday become stars. It is the men who report for spring football, and who work hard and long in the heat of the afternoon sun, who provide the backbone for Thornton's many victorious teams.

Last spring the same outlook presented itself to Coach Lipe as is now before him—a good line, but no backfield. With this problem confronting him he came through with a team that won the South Suburban Championship last fall.

From the best freshman team that Thornton has had in many years Thornton may continue to reign over the South Suburban League.

Next fall and many seasons after, Thornton's football teams will tune up for games on the newly-cultivated grass prepared on the old practice field which has been plowed and rolled and equipped with a drainage system and put in good condition.

Everyone will agree that the game of football is one of the best-known ways for a boy to spend his leisure hours. The game teaches him loyalty to his school in addition to the training in athletics. This lesson in loyalty extends beyond the small limits of his school life. When he is grown, he will probably be as loyal to his government as he now is to Thornton. What hobby could aid a boy's character development more than this?

A boy's mental capacity is given a true test in a football game. Football is one sport that stresses the fundamental of quick, accurate thinking. In later life questions often arise which must be settled immediately and correctly, and experience in this field then proves its worth.

Healthy bodies as well as fine characters are built up by diligent daily football practice. The stiff requirements of good performers on the gridiron make football one of the best tests of courage and strength, which can be offered by a high school

In the years gone by our school has well represented by its football team. Thornton has always had a record of sportsmanship, and football has helped to make its reputation.

Football builds a player's character by providing him with a worthwhile hobby for his spare time and teaching him the necessary aid to good citizenship by his pledge of faithful allegiance to the administration of his land.

Track, the least known and least backed sport, has the largest turnout in students of all athletic events at Thornton. About two hundred boys come out in the spring to spend six weeks of their after-school leisure time. Some may not realize it, but this sport does a great deal toward muscular and mental coordination.

On the track the runner does other things besides move his legs; he must think and figure what his opponent will do. A race has been won more than once by the man who thought his way clearly. Once a man realizes what his opponent is to do, he can go out and beat him to it.

If one can learn to know a man on the track, he can do the same in the outside world. To be a better citizen he must think out the move of the men running his government and give them consideration. His personal aim in the world should be true citizenship.

Idleness is unforgivable—and truthfully is seldom found among the girls of Thornton when such splendid opportunities for physical development and recreation as the Girls Athletic Association offers are available.

What could be better than athletics to keep growing girls busy? Bodies grow strong, and grace and rhythm replace awkwardness. Health is evident in abundance in the ruddy cheeks of hockey players after fast, keen games in the zipping October air. Minds must work rapidly, and coordination of mind and muscle must be a part of every game. Teamwork—good sportsmanship—individual achievement—all these are fostered by the G.A.A.

Girls of Thornton have always been a credit to the community. Healthy in mind and body, they have kept a freshness and alertness of spirit seldom found in high schools. For this characteristic vitality the G.A.A. is largely responsible. By providing competitive games, indoor and outdoor, by giving appropriate awards for outstanding efforts in athletics; and by developing good sportsmanship and smooth teamwork, the Association has created a feeling of cooperation, an attitude of lively interest, which is conducive to the best of citizenship.

This guidance brings to the front the capable girls—those who have clean and honest habits of living that make them stand out at all times. Through their work in the G.A.A. they have grown into finer girls. Future leaders will come from this band, for just as they take part in athletics, so they will participate in the affairs of the nation as true and honest patriots.

That swimming has become one of the most fascinating and all-around American sports is proved by the keener interest being taken in it each year. American swimmers have made such rapid strides in the field during the last few years that they are wholly as competent as foreign professionals, if not more so.

Most people who do so swim for the enjoyment they get—being in the sun light, being able to look quietly at the surrounding country, feeling the restless, cool waves and most of all being away from the daily routine of a busy life. Some people swim for health—to put into action stiff muscles and thus “come out” feeling like different, more energetic persons.

Natation can develop a slow, awkward person into a dexterous one, and this sport is probably the only kind of exercise which is good for all types of people. Because all muscles of the body are so vigorously put into action in this art, they become proportionate to each other and make for that grace which can not be developed as well by any other sport.

By promoting pageants and meets Thornton has succeeded in interesting its girls in this field of sports and then in sustaining this enthusiasm by finding a place in the fetes for every girl.

Swimming is one sport that the world over knows and has known for centuries; it hasn't had its rise in any special country although in past generations certain countries have been known as particularly adept in this art. Many strokes used in swimming have had foreign origins, for some have come from Africa and Australia.

In some lands children know how to swim even before they can walk. Because of the increased swimming facilities, this can be said more every year of American children.

Swimming promotes friendship among communities, cities and even countries. It makes better citizens of its participants both physically and mentally and provides wholesome, thrilling sport, giving pleasurable enjoyment.

May Queen and Attendants

Personality, the standard by which one makes friends, is the effect each individual has upon others. If the impression is good, that being is said to have a pleasing personality.

Personality includes many things and can be shown in a number of ways—a smile, the expression of the face, or the way one walks—but behind all this “indefinable charm” which certain people seem to possess there can be only one explanation: they like people and have a genuine interest in them.

One's unconcern for others, like a dub golfer's indifference in a golf game, is usually caused by her not knowing how to be interested.

When one thinks of others instead of one's self, grace and poise come naturally and thus, the pleasing personality. For this reason is Lorado Taft, American sculptor and lecturer, highly esteemed, not only because of his beautiful sculpture, but because of his genuine feeling of kindness toward his associates.

Great personalities and their works live forever in the minds of the world. If Michelangelo had not been a powerful character, we today might be lacking some of the finest sculpture ever made. Mozart's individuality helped him acclaim his place forever in the sphere of music; Florence Nightingale's made the earth a finer place in which to live; Franz Schubert's helped to produce with his six hundred musical works a more harmonious and lovely world.

Personality or individuality doesn't mean much unless it is made of the right stuff. The girl who always has to be doing something unusual to find pleasure in life has not a lasting personality, but she who can have a good time just using the means of enjoyment already provided her is one who enjoys life more and is more popular with her friends.

Since one's culture helps to form people's opinions not only of the person, but also of the school, city, or country she represents, she should take care to develop character which would be satisfactory to her most critical self.

ADVERTISING

Our leadership, scholarship, and character serve as an advertisement for our school during the four years that we are at Thornton and the time we are at home and in the business world.

What we do and what we say about Thornton—in fact, our every action—make the reputation of our school. Loyalty to Thornton, expressed by our deeds and words, holds our school in high esteem in the hearts of those who come to know us.

It is this same loyalty to our government that advertises our nation in the world. Our patriotism, expressed by the press, by what we say, and by our actions, reflects to other nations the stability of the United States and its importance in the world. Our country is known the world over for the good we speak of it. This advertising of our nation has caused other nations to be more friendly until gradually there has developed a growing commerce between the United States and other countries.

From this commerce have evolved the various methods of transportation—the railroads, the steamships, and the airways. Loyalty to our government leads a train of events toward the betterment of the world.

A great step is taken toward world peace when friendly trade relations are brought about. World peace means better use of the resources of a country. And so, going on, the related events bring about benefits for all, directly or indirectly.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Mr. Toastmaster, Members of the Faculty and Friends: As president of the Class of 1934, it becomes my duty to give an expression of the sentiments of our graduating class. This is a rather sad task inasmuch as it marks the climax to our high school days. In reality it is not as sad as it may seem. During the past four years we have enjoyed many happy events here at Thornton. In addition to our regular school activities we have been fortunate in having two of our basketball teams reach the State finals. One of them having won the championship. Our football teams have been successful, our band and orchestra have done exceptionally well. We have had outstanding accomplishments throughout the school year. Undoubtedly to perform these achievements loyalty had to be predominate, and it was. These have been happy and profitable days.

However, our achievements are not measured by the honors we may receive. Our School has brought more than this. To friendships we have formed, not only among the students, but also with our faculty will mean much in the days that are to come. The loyalty which it has taught us will always remain making us loyal Thorntonites forever.

Some of us have taken studies which have prepared us for college work. We hope that our efforts in the higher schools will continue to bring credit to Thornton. Others of us will be forced by circumstance to take our place in business or industry. We trust that our work there will bring us the title of good citizens.

In closing, I should like to take this opportunity to thank our class principal, Mr. Stephens, for the interest he has taken in us. We trust that the coming years will be pleasant and happy for him. To the Juniors we extend our good wishes and feel certain that the coming year will bring other events which will add to the glory of Thornton.

CLASS PROPHECY

What a day! Never within our memory had the city of New York seen such noise and excitement. Hotels were full, taxicabs whizzed about, and huge brass bands marched up and down the streets hailing the celebrated people who had just come to town, for today a boat was to sail from the harbor carrying members of the class of '34 to the school reunion of 1975, held in Paris, France.

At last, the moment had arrived. Crowds jammed the dock to watch the famous people mount the gangplank. A few moments before the tugs pulled the steamer, the new "J. B. Stephens," from its mooring, the wailing screech of a siren was heard in the street, and as the crowd parted to make way, up drove Richard Searle, chief of the New York police, in his racy squad car. Out of it stepped none other than Benson Fisher, mayor of New York. Mounting the flag-draped speakers' stand, Benson in an eloquent address, formally wished the class "bon voyage" and added a few characteristic remarks about constitutional rights and personal liberty.

With a blasting scream from its whistle the big vessel moved slowly and majestically into the open harbor. One person certainly distinguishable was Gordon Watson, captain and owner of the boat, dressed in a natty white uniform, and broadly smiling upon the bridge.

As the huge liner with its precious burden steamed full ahead in the open water, all was bustle and confusion among the passengers, who were searching for state-rooms and old friends. One person in particular was attracting attention on the main deck, as newspaper reporters and photographers crowded clamorously around him.

"Who's the famous person?" queried one of the passengers of one of the more industrious reporters, who seemed to know what things were all about.

"Why, that's Robert Bentley, the famous stage and movie star," answered Frank

Quirk, the busy reporter. "He made his start in 'Thank You,' 'way back in his high school days."

Just then Bob Bentley, pushing through the surrounding crowd of reporters and admirers, thought he recognized some people coming toward him—none other than Virginia Stanley, Elizabeth Fray, and Bernice Johnsen.

"I'm teaching school now," said Virginia. "Harmony. You know I always loved harmony at high school."

"I'm the American representative to the International Peace Conference," said Bernice Johnsen. "I hope to gather ideas and statistics while I'm in France."

"And what are you going to do in Europe?" asked Bob of Elizabeth.

"I'm on my way to Vienna," she replied, "to study singing for grand opera. The next time you hear of me I shall probably be Mademoiselle Fray, coloratura soprano."

Wishing them success and goodbye for the present, Bob strolled on around the deck looking for more old school friends.

"Well, hello!" he exclaimed, seeing Julia Causgrove deeply absorbed in an exciting game of shuffleboard.

"Hello, Bob," said Julia. "I've been all over the boat but there are some people I can't seem to locate—Frances Speer, for instance. Have you heard anything about her?"

"Yes," answered Bob. "She's at last fulfilling her desires by prospecting for gold in California."

As three figures approached her, Julia recognized Robert Taylor, Ruth Westenberg, and Jane Condon, strolling on deck.

Upon investigation she learned that Robert was the ship's doctor, that Ruth was a prominent bass teacher, and that Jane was society editor of the New York Times.

Julia appeared frightened as the high waves splashed the deck.

"It might be worse," laughed Bob Taylor. "You know, Julia, this ship has gyroscopic stabilizers. Oh, yes! It takes more than a little wave to move the 'J. B. Stephens'!"

Some time later dinner was announced, and the passengers started down to the dining salon for some of the delicious food, cooked by "Rook" Ratkus, who used his famous football tactics and scrambled food beautifully.

Some of the passengers going to dinner walked down by the broad, deeply-carpeted stairs but many preferred to ride down the elevator, if only to see their old friend Tom Verhagen, who was now attending his twenty-fifth year as elevator boy.

The dining salon was luxuriously decorated. Faint music drifted invitingly on the air. It was Bill Morgan's collegiate dance orchestra playing behind the potted palms, and also behind time.

But lo! A hush fell over the room. A beautiful woman was entering.

"That's Ruth Sawyer," someone was heard to whisper. "She's a costume designer of international reputation going to Paris to buy gowns for a New York store."

Yes, sure enough, it was Ruth Sawyer on her way to France to see Oswald Tattum, who was making himself famous as a French costumer. She made her way among the many tables until she found her place beside Jay Gilchrist, now a multi-millionaire manufacturer of monacles.

Lorenz Kipley, radio operator aboard the ship, suddenly burst in bearing a radiogram in his hand. "Listen, everyone, to this message I just received."

At this news all the passengers rushed to the main deck, where they were just in time to see the plane make a perfect landing beside the ship.

"That surely was a narrow escape!" exclaimed Helen Woodrich as she was pulled up on deck.

"Now I'm ready for some of Charles Ratkus' food," Sylvia Radius called from the plane.

But now the ship was within forty miles of France, and the passengers crowded forward to see who would catch the first glimpse of land.

Suddenly there was a new commotion at the rear of the boat. It was Marian Mansfield in her bathing suit climbing up over the railing.

"I'm sorry I'm late, folks," she exclaimed, "but I missed the boat at New York and had to swim to catch you."

When the boat landed at Havre, who should be there but Richard Ebert.

"I'm a hotel owner now," he said. "I'm manager of the great 'Restaurant de Rue de Alex aux Montevideo,' and I invite you to come and make your headquarters with me in Paris."

It was but a short journey to Paris, and we were soon all gathered comfortably about the tables of Paris' most American hotel.

"See that tall dark man over there in the corner?" asked Dick Ebert. "That's Emil Hornyak, internationally known signer. And that attractive lady over there," he added, pointing to another corner, "is Rhoda Bretz, famous artist of the Latin quarter. 'She's been studying art here for three years. She got her start drawing pictures in history class.'"

Tomorrow we all meet here again for the class reunion," continued Dick, "but before we leave, let's have a song from Iva Louise Petty. What will you sing, Iva?"

"For zee benayfeet of zee American audience," said Iva, "I weel seeng, 'T.T.H.S.'"

Thorntonite Year Book

The student editors and the staff who compiled this book are deserving of commendation for their efforts. They have shown rare ability and resourcefulness and the results of their efforts will compare favorably with the year books of former years and with those of other schools

The Harvey Tribune

The craftsmen who produced this year book also produce The Harvey Tribune. This newspaper was founded at the time of the founding of the city, six years before this high school was organized. This school, this city and this newspaper are traveling the long trail together
